HOSTAGE NEGOTIATIONS

DINNER & PRESENTATION

CRIME SCENE DO NOT CROSS

It may sound simple but often times, communication can be the best defense law enforcement has to keep you safe in a crisis situation. Despite what you may see on TV, most barricades and hostage situations in the U.S. are resolved through negotiations or a combination of negotiation and tactical force. Less than one in five incidents are resolved strictly through tactical means.

Get an inside look at how FBI crisis negotiators do their job in a special presentation for FBICCAAA members & guests. These specially trained agents not only use communication to resolve major crises and critical incidents in the US but overseas as well by responding when an American citizen has been taken hostage or kidnapped.
